Thank you, Leigh. Why does there even need to be a MOU between the developers and City College? Is it just because some access easements need to be tweaked or is there something more going on?

Hello Christopher,

Thank you so much for your comment. We are aware of the College Trustee agenda item and have met with representatives from the College recently to discuss their process. They have a process whereby the Trustees will be voting on the "universe of negotiating items" for the MOU and then delegate authority to the Chancellor to execute it with the developer team. The City and developer team has been very clear that the public parking allowance in the City's approval documents reflects what the City is going to accommodate. I expect there will be continued discussions between the College and the developer after Thursday's hearing.

Please let me know if I can provide additional clarity. Thanks again, Leigh

Dear Leigh and Seung Yen,

I'm very disturbed to see that the draft Balboa Reservoir MOU that the City College Board of Trustees will consider this Thursday afternoon at 4 pm would require the developers to build a 980-space (!) public parking garage. (Here's the draft MOU: https://go.boarddocs.com/ca/ccsf/Board.nsf/files/BRTLHB569CF4/\$file/BALBOA%20RESERVOIR%20MOU%20-%20Draft%20II%20-%20CCSF%20AND%20RCP%20-%200072220.pdf) I urge you to inform your contacts at City College that this last-minute demand is a non-starter that exceeds that maximum amount of parking considered under the SEIR and that City College should instead consider measures that are at least minimally consistent with the City's transit-first policies. Thank you.
Sincerely,
Christopher Pederson
