I hear you.

Yes they are done first, but I just don't know if there's an official "we're done" moment before the administrative DEIR. And if there is, I don't know if Wade is comfortable sharing when that would be, since he probably has no idea. But let me ask and get back to you on that..

Thanks one question. . .

In your slide, I would remove #4, since it seems like promising something that we can't guarantee. And there's no formal deadline or guideline for issuing finishing those technical analyses.

I was under the impression the technical studies are always done before the first (internal) DEIR and then there are several drafts between the first and the first public DEIR. So maybe you are saying to push it out closer to the draft EIR? I think we are just trying to give the public a sense of the cadence of the work – and we definitely don't want to over promise.

Thanks, K

Hi Kearstin,

Thanks for checking in on this.

The public scoping meeting will be a couple weeks after the notice of preparation, which can only be issued when the project description is finalized. "summer" is probably the best bet for the scoping meeting.

In your slide, I would remove #4, since it seems like promising something that we can't guarantee. And there's no formal deadline or guideline for issuing finishing those technical analyses.

I am attaching some draft slides that we never ended up using, but feel free to use for reference or repackage. The dates that you see in these slides are as specific as EP is comfortable with saying at this time.

Gimme a call tomorrow if you want to discuss more?

Hi Jeremy,

We've put this draft slide together for the CAC. We want to make sure we have it right. Can you please review. Where should we put the public scoping meeting? Also we think Planning has presented a few slides on this – can you share those with us as well.
